

To the leader of Oathaven.

From

The House of Lord Poul Orlovsky

Greetings to Sir Roland Bennet,

A man of the House met with you some months ago and House Orlovsky is pleased to witness that the true blood of Brevoiy is bringing a civilizing agency to the lawless lands of the south. We admire the tenacity of such salt of the earth and hope for more good tidings in the future.

As always in Brevoiy, the dragon has two heads. Unfortunately, they are turning on one another as the political situation in Brevoiy is deteriorating. House Orlovsky holds out hope that a true Rogarvian heir will come forth and such struggles can be averted, but the Vanishing is nearly 15 years past and there has been no sign.

We wish to continue above the conflict and remain steadfast in our loyalty to House Rogarvia, but there are difficulties that present themselves when others do not follow such dedication. Over the past 10 years, the Aldori Swordpact has been quietly expanding into the halls of House Rogarvia left empty during the Vanishing. Houses Orlovsky and Surtova have opposed this at every juncture, but like weeds, they continue their encroachment. It may be said that with their expansion southward as well, that perhaps the Swordlords are looking to break Brevoiy and forge a new Rostland. I do not believe that the new nations in the 'Stolen Lands' are mere vessels to Restov, but the stars see all. On the other side of things, House Surtova continues to pretend Noleski Surtova is more than merely Lord Regent. Most recently Lord Surtova has begun pushing for formal recognition of his sister as his heir and regent if he should pass away before marriage despite the fact that she is clearly unfit to rule.

Both of these pressures against the basis of this nation are beginning to crack the bedrock. In order to smooth the land, perhaps Oathaven would see clear to affirm themselves as a separate nation state from our brothers in Restov. It would go far in creating recognition of your own landed gentry in New Stetven.

Signed, House Orlovsky